

Update on National 5, Higher and Advanced Higher courses 2020-21

A message for parents and carers

27 January 2021

With remote learning continuing until at least mid-February, the National Qualifications 2021 Group* appreciates that you may be anxious to know how this will impact on your child and their school or college.

We have written to schools and colleges to remind them that maximising learning and teaching time remains the current priority. Overall assessment of your child's educational achievements (also described as attainment) should therefore take place once they are back in school or college.

Evidence of your child's attainment remains a key part of awarding their grades in 2021. During January and February 2021, SQA is publishing subject-specific guidance and assessment resources for Higher and Advanced Higher courses. This will support teachers and lecturers with assessment planning for later in the 2020-21 session.

Understanding Standards

Ensuring that your child's assessment is marked to the national standard is critical for reassuring everyone that qualification results in 2021 are credible. Teachers and lecturers are being supported by Understanding Standards resources produced by SQA. These resources form an important part of quality assurance and support teachers and lecturers by helping them strengthen their understanding of the national standard required for assessment.

Keeping you updated

All partners are working as quickly as possible in an evolving situation and will continue to issue regular updates on the next steps. Ministers will update Parliament about lockdown measures and the reopening of schools and colleges on 2 February 2021.
